McLean of Missouri Seated by the House.

Congressional Proceedings

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, December 15.—Reed, of Missouri, presented as a question of privilege the memorial of Jos. H McLean, who claimed to have been elected to succeed the late Thos Allen, as representative from the second congressional district of Missouri to the 47th congress. McLean asserts that he received a plurality of votes cast at the special election but that the secretary of state absolutely refused giving him a certificate on the ground that the second district had been legislated out of existence He asked the house to declare him entitled to the seat.

Reed said there was no dispute to McLean's plurality. The reason which was alleged for not giving the certificate was that the redistricting of the state had abolished the old district. He admitted that he had no documentary evidence to show that that was the ground of refusal.

Carlisle, of Kentucky, argued that redistricting of the state only went into effect at the election for the subsequent congress If Reed had no evidence of the ground of refusal of certificate by the secretary of state, he thought that the question should be referred to the committee on elections

Clardy of Missouri stated that Col. Broadhead, the rival candidate for congress, did not deny that McLean was entitled to the seat, and he had never entertained an idea of contesting the election He had authorized him (Clardy) to say that he did not wish to interpose any obstacle to McLean taking the seat.

Bland of Missouri said there were precedents to sustain the secretary of state on the ground which he had taken He thought that the committee of elections should investigate.

Springer of Illinois favored the immediate seating of McLean.

Reed said that to refuse to admit McLean was not only a denial of justice to him but to his constituents who elected him.

The question was then put as to whether the claimant be sworn in and was decided in the affirmative, 144 against 17

McLean appeared before the house and took the oath of office.

Ingham, of Pennsylvania, introduced a bill providing that whenever it shall become necessary to increase the speed on which mail is carried on a star route it shall be readvertised for the reduced time required. Referred

The house then in committee of the whole resumed consideration of the postoffice bill, Calkins, of Illinois, in the chair.

Townshend, of Illinois, delivered an argument in favor of the amendment which he proposed to offer for the bill abolishing postage on second class matter.

Atkins of Tennessee thought there would be considerable danger of creating a pretty large deficiency in the revenue of the postoffice department if reduction should be made in the rates of postage.

Grinnell of Minnesota did not think any measure could be passed by congress which would be received with more approbation than on reducing the rate of postage.

Holman of Indiana thought the present plan of inland mail transportation by railroads was open to objection and considered it necessary to remedy its defects. As to land grant roads they should be required to transport mails on a basis fixed by decision of the United States supreme court.

Regan, of Texas, opposed reduction, holding that its effect would be to remove a small tax from persons best able to bear it.

Robinson, of New Jersey, closed the discussion. The bill proposed to reduce postage tax on individual people 33⅓ per cent. It was a reduction which the experience of the world had shown to be in the interest of the spread of intelligence and the dissemination of knowledge. Whatever danger there might be in the experiment for himself and those who were associated with him, he accepted the responsibility before the American people. This was a measure in the interest of individual people, and if additional tax was levied for its support, let it fall on the aggregated capital of the country. Another change in the bill was the omission of a provision for the benefit of certain sections and in certain interests of what was known as special mail facilities In spending $600,000 which had been appropriated, the postmaster general had found it necessary to spend $185,000, yet at the last session there was a great clamor for special facilities. All those facilities were given to certain special trains that left New York in the gray of the morning, just after the metropolitan papers were issued and reached the country in advance of the local press. He did not object to that, but he did object to paying for special facilities for mail carried on regular passenger trains. He had been directed by the committee on appropriations to offer an amendment to the bill providing that the compensation for carrying mails to railroad companies that received government aid in bond subsidies as well as land grants shall not exceed fifty per cent. of the amount allowed by law as compensation for the same service by railroads which had not received government aid. Of course this amendment was for the benefit of the people, and when that was done at the expense of a power the individual who took a share in that benefit suffered at the hands of the power. When a man undertook to benefit individual interests he must expect to receive the blame of the consolidated power whom he attacked. He (Robeson) for one should be content in the records of history if it were understood that so long as he held the key of the position he was neither overridden by power nor frightened by obloquy.

The bill was then read by sections for amendment.

In speaking to formal amendment Mills of Texas protested against reduction of the rate of postage. Like all reductions of taxation since the war it was a reduction which began at the wrong end. What was all this talk about a superabundant treasury when there was a national debt of $1,400,000,000? It was not the poor people but the commercial interests that paid the tax These interests were interests which demanded reduction and congress was going down on its knees and taking all the burdens off of them and placing them on the poor people How many gentlemen of the other side who voted for this reduction would vote to take the tax from cotton ties.

Springer, of Illinois, favored because he believed the postal service to be self supporting, even after the reduction was made

Blanchard, of Louisiana, moved to increase the appropriation for transportation by steamboat routes from six to seven hundred thousand Rejected.

Caswell, of Wisconsin, on behalf of the committee on appropriations, offered an amendment increasing the appropriation for 'star" service from five million to $5,950,000

Upson, of Texas, moved a further increase of $25,000 Rejected—28 to 24

Caswell's amendment was adopted

Robinson, of Massachusetts, offered an amendment appropriating $600,000 for necessary and special mail facilities.

Hiscock, of New York, offered an amendment to fix the amount at $200,000.

Pending action the committee rose.

Dunnell, of Minnesota, offered a resolution reciting an allegation that some collectors of customs on the northern frontier were in receipt of large fees from sale of blanks, which are not turned into the treasury, and that said collectors are in the pay of importers and corporations, and directing the committee on ways and means to inquire into the truth of these allegations Adopted.

SENATE

Cameron of Pennsylvania, Ingalls and Sherman presented a petition to increase pensions of one-armed and one-legged soldiers. Referred.

Pendleton and Sherman presented the memorial of the tobacco board of trade of Cincinnati, asking modification or repeal of tax on tobacco. Referred.

Ferry reported favorably the house bill making it an offense punishable by fine and imprisonment to personate a postoffice inspector. Placed on calendar.

Anthony reported the house amendment to the resolution providing for printing reports of the tariff commission. Agreed to. It provides for printing, indexing and binding 42,000 copies of the report and accompanying papers for the use of congress and the tariff commission, and for printing 20,000 copies of the report without testimony for the use of the two houses.

At the close of the morning hour consideration of the French spoliation bill was resumed

Hoar advocated the bill.

Sherman reviewed the history of the claims.

Bayard was glad to have an opportunity to express his belief in the justice of the claims.

After further debate the bill was amended and passed, and the senate resumed consideration of the Pendleton civil service bill, Miller, of New York, on the floor.

Miller said the senator from Georgia feared that this bill, if passed, would tend to establish life tenure of office, but in fact it would simply put back the tenure of appointive officers where it was the first fifty years of our national life That senator also professed a fear that the bill would establish an aristocracy. This talk would not do to frighten children with; much less would it serve to frighten brave senators on the democratic side from supporting this bill.—If the evils of our present system continue to increase in the same proportion as in the past the government could not outlive another century. The people had tired of evils and had demanded partial reform. This demand was made in no doubtful tone, and the man in the party who could not understand the meaning of the recent popular upheaval must be blind indeed. The democratic party at least ought not and could not resist the people's will. If anybody imagined the people, tired of republican corruption and profligacy, overthrew the republican party merely to give democrats an opportunity to practice the same methods he was seriously in error. Republican senators seemed to understand the people's meaning and he was glad to see the change that had come over the spirit of their dreams on this subject, for whatever might be the cause of it the change was most salutary. Still the change was remarkable. Last session civil service reform was sneered at and the senator from Ohio (Pendleton) was regarded as insincere or visionary in pressing it on public attention, while political assessments were defended as a justifiable means of gaining and retaining power. But now the general opinion seemed to be that political assessments were a crime or even worse in the politician's creed and a serious blunder, and that monopoly of office by "right of conquest" was not the surest means of retaining power. Republicans were now so thoroughly conscious of the death of political assessments that they came to congress on the first day of the session, and by their president asked the speedy passage of a law to prevent them from relapsing into sin.

On motion of Pendleton the first section of the bill was amended so as to require that civil service commissioners be confirmed by the senate.

The question was on Allison's amendment providing that there shall be three commissioners instead of five, and that they shall not be connected with any of the departments.

Bayard spoke of the importance of reforming the civil service and the demoralizing effects upon public men of the "spoils system." He would support the pending bill and was quite ready to meet the responsibility for which the senator from Georgia said democrats who supported it would be held.

Morgan offered two amendments, which were ordered printed One of them provided that no advice or recommendation of any applicant for examination or appointment by a senator or representative shall be received or considered by examiners, unless it shall have been previously asked in writing, by one or more of them. The other authorizes the committee to designate in each state five examiners, not in the service of the United States, and not more than three of them belonging to the same party, who shall examine applicants residing in the state.

Blair offered a resolution, which was agreed to, directing the secretary of the interior to furnish the latest and fullest information in the possession of the bureau of education in relation to technical education in schools endowed in whole or part by the government, and also in certain other schools.

Spencer and Bliss at Variance

WASHINGTON, December 15.—The Republican has the following special dispatch from Syracuse, N. Y:

Ex Senator Geo E Spencer, who is claimed to be wanted by the government in connection with the star route cases, and for whom it is alleged many deputy United States marshals have been looking, under the direction of the department of justice, is now at the little town of Champion, a few miles from Watertown, Jefferson county. It has been declared that the government would arrest Spencer whenever he could be found, consequently there is much curiosity expressed here as to what action will be taken now that Spencer's whereabouts are known, and that he is within easy reach of officers of the department of justice. Ex Senator Spencer has a brother living in Watertown He visited him yesterday and left for Champion this morning. Champion is the place of his birth and he has many friends and relatives residing there, whom he has not seen in several years. He proposes to remain there about two weeks Your correspondent ascertaining his whereabouts, followed him to Champion and there interviewed him. His statements are direct contradictions of Attorney Bliss and prosecuting agents of the government. Mr. Spencer says his present residence is in Nevada, and that this fact has all along been known to the department of justice.

He claims that though he was in Washington all through the first star route trial, and tried in every way to meet Bliss and be sworn, Bliss would not see him, and did not answer a note which Mr. Spencer wrote him Immediately after the conclusion of the first trial he called upon Bliss and informed him that he had very important mining interests in the west which demanded his attention. Mr Bliss then told him to go He has not yet received notice of any subpœna as a witness in the second trial. At present he does not know whether he will go to Washington or not. He knows Brady and Dorsey well, but says he never saw them together. Neither did he, as is claimed by the star route prosecution, ever see any money pass between them or know of any such transaction. He says he does not know anything about the case which would be of any material interest to the government.

The above dispatch was shown to Colonel Geo Bliss last night, and he said.

"Mr. Spencer may be at Watertown or in that vicinity, or he may not be. It was reported to-day that he was in Washington, and a gentleman who knows him well, says he was here on Sunday. He is probably now moving about in New York state, and the government will find him. It is true that his residence is in Nevada, and that he has mining interests there. It is true also that he has been there at times during the past two months. The marshal of Nevada has tried to find him several times, but he had always 'just gone to California,' or left a few days ago for Montana.' He has persistently eluded service of process As to his having been in Washington during the former trial, I can say that is true. I saw him myself several times, and when he says he tried to meet me and I would not see him, he lies. I shook hands with him in the Arlington hotel, one evening, in the presence of several witnesses. He never wrote me a note, and I, of course, answered none. He left Washington without my knowledge, and when he says that I 'told him to go' he lies, and he knows that he lies. There is evidence in his own handwriting, dated Omaha, Neb, July last, which will prove he lies in this matter, and he will have an opportunity, in answer to a charge of contempt of court, to swear that he has lied. It may be true that he knows nothing about the star route cases, and that he never saw Brady and Dorsey together, but he told several gentlemen of national reputation that he did know and had seen certain questionable transactions. He told the same parties that he did see money pass between those gentlemen, and that he did know of their transactions, and he will soon have an opportunity to make a statement concerning these matters under oath. This is all I have to say concerning the matter."

Winter Sports.

NEW YORK, December 15.—At the games given by the Mossley Harriers, of England, and the Manhattan Athletic Club of this city, at the Madison Square Garden, George, the English champion, was defeated in a ten-mile run, by T. W. Delaney, of the Gramercy Athletic Club. Delaney's time was 56.07, beating the best American record of 57.32. George's time was 57.07 2-5, which is 4.11 behind his best English record In the sixty-yard run, which took place early in the evening, L. E. Myers made the distance in 6 2-5 seconds, beating the record. A large crowd was present.

Ahead of the Goddess of Liberty.

WASHINGTON, December 15. Course No. 103 on the Washington Monument was finished yesterday, and the top is now two and one-half inches above the highest point of the head-dress of the statue of the Goddess of Liberty on the capitol. The height of the shaft is 336 feet 5⅞ inches above the floor of the obelisk, or 375 feet 4 inches above the average high water of the Potomac. Calling the level of the east pavement of the capitol 90 feet above high water, would make the height of the top of the statue on the dome above this pavement 285 feet 1½ inches. The distance from the top of the monument to the top of the statue is 7,500 feet.

American Shipping.

WASHINGTON, December 15.—A bill was presented in congress to-day by the joint select committee on the decline of American shipping. It contains these sections. That no vessel engaged in commerce with the dominion of Canada shall be subject to tonnage duty, nor shall consular certificates be required from the same, that individual liability of ship owners shall be limited in proportion to any or all debts and liabilities his individual share of the vessel bears to the whole; that when any vessel, whether steam or sail, shall be constructed and equipped in the United States for foreign trade, including trade between Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, in whole or in part of materials or production of the United States, the owner or owners of such vessel shall be entitled to receive and collect from the United States a drawback or sum equal in amount to the duty which would have been collected on imported materials of like description, and equal liability with American materials used in the construction and equipment of engines, boilers and other appurtenances of such steam or sail vessel, provided that in ascertaining such drawback the duties on such iron or steel material shall be computed on iron and steel advanced in manufacture not beyond the point of plates, angle-bars and rods, and provided further that this section shall apply only to vessels commenced after the passage of this act.

The minority report is signed by Senator Vest and Representatives McLane and Cox. The report declares that the war which began in 1861 was not in any sense the cause of the commercial phenomena under consideration It only accelerated the course of events. It would have been inevitable even had there been no war. It would be a great mistake to infer, as many who have given testimony before the joint committee seem to infer, if all obstructions and burdens or instrumentalities of so much commerce of the United States as pertains to the ocean were removed we should at no distant day be again a great ship-building and ship-using nation. Such a result is impossible If all obstructions were removed and if ships of most improved pattern and modern construction and fully-equipped were given the United States and placed as free gifts at our wharves it is doubtful if our ocean commerce and shipping would be materially relieved and developed. One reason in general nature against such a revival is the preoccupation of our people in other more attractive and remunerative employments.

How Tom Ochiltree Got to Congress

WASHINGTON, December 15.—The Baltimore Sun has the following The Galveston district in Texas affords the most remarkable example of political revulsion in the great political tidal wave of 1882, and it is said that in no congressional district in the United States has there ever been such an active canvass as was made in that district in the campaign which closed on November 7th last. The district covers an area of territory—four times larger than the entire state of Massachusetts. Col. Ochiltree, the independent and republican candidate, traveled more than two thousand miles outside of railroad, and made fifty-three speeches during a canvass extending over a period of about six weeks Thirteen staunch democratic counties of the district, which had always been considered as solid as the Rock of Ages of the democratic side, flopped over completely, and gave majorities for Ochiltree and against the regular democratic candidate. The city of Galveston, which is as reliable a democratic city as is the city of Baltimore or New York, turned down the democratic nominee, and rolled up a rousing majority for Ochiltree. Under all the circumstances, the change from the republican to democratic side in many districts of the northwest, are not near so wonderful as this change in Texas, where an outspoken republican, a supporter of every measure which grew out of the war, and a devoted friend of Grant, rides in his car of triumph over prostrate democratic majorities. Colonel Ochiltree to-day related an incident in this connection which is worthy of mention He said in the latter part of August, just prior to his leaving Washington to enter on his canvass in Texas, he dined with General Ben. Butler and several other prominent public men, including a justice of the supreme court, at the house of a republican senator from the Pacific coast. As the party was about to separate the supreme court justice, considering the apparent hopelessness of the contest upon which General Butler and Colonel Ochiltree were about to engage, said, jocularly: "Good by Governor Butler, good-by Congressman Ochiltree."

"This was very funny," remarked Colonel Ochiltree to-day, "and, perhaps, it is funny yet, but here we are all the same, Governor-elect Butler and Congressman-elect Ochiltree."

Colonel Ochiltree, in speaking of his course in the next house, said he was elected by the whole people of his district, and he didn't consider that he owed allegiance to either party, and he should always vote for what he believed to be the best interests of his constituents. He would not vote for Sam. Randall for speaker, but there were other democrats who had been named for the position, for whom he would vote if given opportunity.

Mysterious Disappearance

CHICAGO, December 15.—Annie Loftus Jackson, aged 14, daughter of an employe in the office of the auditor of the Illinois Central railway, has been missing since Monday. It has been discovered just before her disappearance that she visited George C. Boddington, a medical student. Boddington was arrested, on suspicion of being connected with her disappearance. He denies any knowledge of her whereabouts.

MILWAUKEE, December 15.—R. D. Whitehead, of the Humane society, who went to Nebraska to look after Maggie Hennecke, telegraphed to the father of the missing girl today that nothing could be learned in Hastings and Brown, who claims to have found the abductor, had gone to Iowa. Whitehead left Hastings for home to-day, in company with a detective. He will stop at Shenandoah, Iowa, to look up Mr. Brown. The receipt of the dispatch was at first denied by Hennecke, who shortly afterwards left the city, instructing to keep his departure secret. It is surmised he also went to Iowa. Positive tidings are not expected before to-morrow.

Nothing has been heard yet from old man Heiser, formerly of Carpels, Heiser & Co, trunk manufacturers, who disappeared Oct. 14th, taking with him $25,000 and leaving an aged wife. It has been found that Heiser left in the company of the wife of a saloon keeper, supposed for (German).

A third mysterious disappearance is that of Mary Nelson, an attractive married woman, aged twenty-five, who left in November, leaving a husband and three children, one of which is a nursery babe.

Grave Robbers

PHILADELPHIA, December 15.—James Bonezer, one of the trustees of Lebanon cemetery, has made affidavit charging Dr. Forbes, demonstrator of anatomy at Jefferson Medical College, and his assistants, Drs. Lohman and Denham, with conspiracy to desecrate the graves of that cemetery. Forbes has been arrested. The trial of body snatchers began today. McNamara and Philliott plead guilty and the two Chews not guilty. The jury after a brief deliberation returned a verdict of guilty. On the announcement of the verdict McNamara asked permission to make a clear breast of his connection with Jefferson college and hauling the bodies. The judge called him to the stand and had him sworn. He repeated the confession already published, in which he states that he was engaged by Drs. Forbes, Denham and Lohman, and the doctors knew the bodies were taken from Lebanon cemetery. Drs. Forbes and Lohman were held in $5,000 bail each to answer to the charge of complicity in the robbery of graves of Lebanon cemetery.

APPALLING ACCIDENT.

George Bundy Struck by an Engine on the Crossing.

His Skull Crushed and Other Injuries Received

From which there are no Hopes of Recovery.

At half past two o'clock yesterday morning an accident happened at the Huerfano street crossing of the Denver & Rio Grande which will undoubtedly result fatally. It is the first serious accident of the kind that has ever occurred at any of the railroad crossings in this vicinity.

On Thursday evening George M. Bundy, a young man who has been a resident of Colorado Springs for some time, and who is quite well known to many of our citizens, hired a horse and buggy of Messrs Hundley & Low for the purpose of attending the dance given by the Manitou Social club, at Saratoga hall, Manitou. He drove from Colorado Springs to Colorado City, where a young lady to whom he had been paying some attention joined him. They attended the party and shortly after midnight started on the return trip home. Upon arriving at Colorado City it was suggested by the gentle man that they continue their drive to Colorado Springs, procure some refreshments and then return home On reaching here it was ascertained that all the restaurants were closed, and Mr. Bundy and the lady drove back to the home of the latter in Colorado City. Here the lady was left and Mr. Bundy turned about and started for the Springs

Beyond what is related by the engineer nothing is known of what transpired between the time of Bundy's departure from Colorado City and the time the accident occurred

The story as told by the engineer, who by the way is Mr. Summers, one of the oldest and most trusted employes of the Denver & Rio Grande, is as follows' Summers had run into Colorado Springs as engineer of the first section of freight train No 21. The engine of which he had control had aided in pulling the freight train up the steep grade on the other side of the Divide. At Divide station the engine was detached from the train and from that point to Pueblo ran as the first section of freight No 21. He was running through the yards in this city at the customary rate of speed required by the ordinances, and just as he approached the Huerfano street crossing he noticed a horse and buggy crossing the track ahead of him He immediately shut of steam and reversed his lever but before the engine could be stopped it struck the vehicle, completely demolishing it and dashing its occupant to the ground. Engineer Summers as soon as the engine stopped jumped off to ascertain what injury had been done. He found a man whom he afterward learned was Bundy lying in an unconscious condition near the track.

No time was lost in notifying the night watchman at the depot of the accident. Bundy was conveyed to the depot and medical assistance summoned, but was afterwards removed to the Crawford house, where at the time of writing he lies in a precarious condition.

It was found, upon examination, that his skull had been fractured just back of his right ear, and that his right side had become completely paralyzed by the shock. About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon an operation was performed by Drs. Solly, Sanford and Bull. It was found that the skull was badly shattered and the brain completely disorganized. Last evening a GAZETTE reporter visited the room in which the injured man lay. He was still unconscious and the physicians entertained no hopes of his recovery.

It is almost impossible to offer any explanation as to how the accident happened. Bundy although not a total abstainer had the reputation of being very temperate in his habits. Those who saw and associated with him at the dance on Thursday night say that he drank some, but not to excess, and that when he started for home he was perfectly sober.

George Bundy came here last January from Morrisville, Vermont, where his parents, wife and sister now reside. He is well known to Mr. George E. White, who was instrumental in bringing him west. He has worked at various avocations and had just been employed to drive the Pacific Express company's wagon.

Mr. White telegraphed Bundy's relatives the particulars of the accident, but no answer had been received from them at a late hour last night

RUBY CAMP.

An Unusually Open Winter in the Mountains.

Regular Correspondence of the Gazette

IRWIN, December 12

Notwithstanding quite as much mining is being done at present as at any previous time, all is going on so smoothly and regularly I am of late at a loss for items of news which must account for my not writing more frequently.

To-day I have a sad accident to record—the first of the kind in this vicinity resulting in loss of life. H H Pell and a son of Captain Townsend, aged about eighteen, of this place, were yesterday passing round the head of O be-joyful creek where the mountain side is precipitous for a great height above and below the trail Along the crest of the mountain, which is a sharp ridge, was a heavy overhanging cliff of snow, formed by wind-driven snow from the opposite side of the mountain While passing this most dangerous portion of the trail the overhanging snow directly above them appears to have toppled over, carrying before it the snow on the slopes below, to the valley beneath The men heard and saw the snow coming upon them and endeavored to escape from its track, but were caught and carried down the mountain slope and over precipices almost perpendicular, and two of which are from 100 to 200 feet high, a distance of over a quarter of a mile Townsend says he knew nothing from the time the snow struck him, until he found himself buried in the snow, in a standing position, nearly to the shoulders How long he had remained in that position before regaining consciousness, he could not tell Drawing himself out and not much the worse for his fearful experience, he looked for Mr. Pell, but could find no trace of him, and then returned to town and told the story as above, which has since been seen by his tracks and the hole in the snow where he was buried, to be true in every particular.

This morning a party went out in search of and to bring in the body of Mr. Pell The body was found but ten feet from where young Townsend was buried, and four feet beneath the surface of the snow The back of the skull had been crushed in the descent The body was brought into town this evening Where the accident happened the snow was from two to three feet deep

Up to the last few days we have had but little winter weather in this basin The snow is now from six to twelve inches deep which is not more than one third of what we had at this time other winters

The Forest Queen Co are working thirty-eight men, and are in good ore in every part of the mine, more ore is being produced than at any previous time A winze has been sunk and a level is being run below the tunnel level, and here the vein is found better defined, more uniform, and the ore seen larger than above. The ore from the lower level contains some galena and antimony, but is quite as rich in ruby as at higher levels The output is estimated as one thousand to fifteen hundred dollars per day.

A small force is employed at stoping from the 100 foot level in the Ballion King mine, producing a considerable quantity of fine ore, considering the force employed

Messrs Thompsons and Fuller are drifting on the Howard Extension vein taking out rich ruby and native silver ore

The Short brothers, who have been engaged for some months past running a tunnel to cut the Old Sheik vein, are expecting daily to reach it

Messrs Minor, Grover et al, who lately purchased the Oaks mine, are extending the Old Shiek tunnel to reach the Oaks vein, which they expect to do in three or four weeks.

Richey and Tutor, who have been engaged for two or three months past in running a tunnel to reach the Ruby Chief vein at the east end of the claim, have now some small seams of ore, and expect to reach the main vein in eight to ten feet.

Loller and Owens are running a short tunnel to reach the Elk vein, from which they will drift This is one of the largest veins in Elk basin.

We have now frequent inquiries in regard to the anthracite coals west of this. It seems a difficult matter to make it known that the largest veins, and the best anthracite is west of this, probably owing to discredit given by parties here and at Crested Butte who have coal lands which they wish to dispose of. If it were known in the east that there are numerous overlying veins of the best quantity of bituminous and anthracite coal from three to thirty feet thick on the North Gunnison and tributaries, it is not likely that they would remain long in the hands of locators, and as public domain. The inquiries now being made show some coal, and railroad men have learned something of them, and realize the worth that is in them.

The weather here was favorable for viewing the transit, and some of us did so through smoked glass E. C.

Double Murder

CHICAGO, December 15. A St. Paul Pioneer Press special from Greenville, Minn., says. Jno. Callighan, who had been on a long spree, was being taken home by a son aged twelve, when Marshal Noonan tried to arrest Callighan, when a blacksmith named Morris interfered and the father and son drove away. During the row that followed they were pursued and four shots fired at them. The father was killed instantly and two shots penetrated the body of the boy causing fatal injuries A crowd attracted by the outcries found Noonan and Morris clinching and each charging the other with murder Both were arrested The citizens were so excited that if they had known who was guilty they would have lynched him. The boy, in giving his supposed dying statement, said he believed Noonan did the shooting, but would not swear There is no positive evidence against the murderer, though several arrests were made

After the Harvest

WASHINGTON, December 15.—Though contracts are to be made in January for the star mail service, 144,000 miles of route, principally in the west and south, for which not more than 100 bids have been received. The department thinks the cause of the few bids is owing to the fact that not so much money is in the business as formerly.

Mr William R. Balch, a newspaper man, recently managing editor of the Philadelphia American, has written an article suggesting that newspaper reporters be made special policemen He thinks they would give very valuable aid in the detection of crime

One of the Denver papers made a rather odd blunder the other day in a headline. It spoke of the celebration of Gladstone's fiftieth birthday In fact the celebration was of the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into parliament, while he is already past the time of three score and ten.

Southern democratic papers are putting Jeff Davis forward as a presidential candidate for 1884 And northern democratic papers continue to boast of the solid south

We should think some of the papers would have learned during the last campaign that arguments of this sort are not of very great value.

Discussion of Senator Pendleton's civil service bill like the speech made the other day by Senator Brown will hardly help the democrats into power No doubt the Georgia senator only expressed opinions held by many of the 'practical politicians,' but this is not a very good year for sneering at civil service reformers.

One of our exchanges, referring to a statement that Governor Grant will make most of his appointments from the republican party, says that Mr Grant is "a gentleman of taste and discrimination" We wonder what the same paper thought of Mr. Grant during the campaign and what it will think of his taste and discrimination if he disappoint it

There is a question of veracity between ex-Senator George E Spencer, lately removed by President Arthur from the position of government director of the Union Pacific railroad for aiding star routers, and Colonel George Bliss, one of the leading lawyers for the prosecution. We trust we shall hear something more about Spencer's failure to appear as a witness in the last trial

The question of presidential succession is again referred to. The vice-president having become president, the presiding officers of the senate and the speaker of the house are next in the line of succession. But the present congress will expire next March and so will Senator Davis' senatorial term In the ordinary course of affairs new presiding officers of the senate and house will be not be chosen for about a year Suppose there shall be no special session and President Arthur shall die before next December, who will be president?

The Greeley Tribune, under the title, 'Stand aside, Mr Tabor,' has the following to say about that aspiring schemer 'This "gentleman, it seems, shares conspicuously the common weakness of humanity—the 'love of fame Not satisfied, however, with 'becoming famous as a bonanza man, a manipulator of stocks, and a builder of marble 'fronts, he would fain win laurels in the "state. To that end the doughty lieutenant 'governor is said to be industriously ma"nipulating the wires to secure to his "own advancement towards senatorial honors "In view of this avowed ultimatum the Tri"bune is moved to say, 'Horatius, repress "your noble rage' There are grave objections "to be urged, which may be tersely summed 'up Too much bonanza Too much Little "Pittsburg Too vague a moral status, a weak 'eral unfitness for the position, and lastly too "pronounced a sentiment among the would be 'constituency, besides"

Here we have another glimpse of the great American assessor 'Jay Hubbell has been 'at his Michigan home away up by the shore 'of Lake Superior, and there practiced his 'assessing hand with some entirely new 'movements 'One of the victims' tells the "Chicago Tribune how they had a champagne 'supper the other night His entertainments 'of the kind have a considerable local reputation in their way, and twenty five men "were glad to accept invitations. Arrived on the ground they were given a "plenty of the cup which sparkles, 'with due proportion of solids, but when "the hilarity was at the highest the host "suddenly uprose and proposed a subscription for Trinity church! Some of those "present had hoped for a little relaxation not "wholly unconnected with cards and "chips," "others thought only of tarrying long at the "wine, and never was a company more as "tonished since the feast of Belshazzar' But "there was no help for it Hubbell started "the business by signing a paper, agreeing to "give $100 annually for three years, the "guests following with $50 each, and then "went home with angry passions raging"

We copy the following interesting notice from a Denver paper "The approaching "death of an old man in a farm house near "Muskegee, Wisconsin, recalls one of the "most thrilling incidents of the memorable "session of congress of 1860 61 The secession fever was at its height, and the southern "members who had in their impetuous way "been loading it in the halls of congress "for years were making fiery and intemperate speeches preparatory to withdrawing from the national legislature Hardly "a day passed but witnessed a scene of "wild disorder on the floor or the talk of "a duel at night Early in the session Roger "A Pryor, then a representative from Vir"ginia, made a terrific disunion speech, in "which he used language especially severe to "ward his political opponents John I Pot"ter, then a member from Wisconsin, replied, "and was not himself especially choice in the "use of words which he applied to the young "Virginian Such talk meant fight, and "Pryor had no alternative in those times but "to challenge which he did This gave Pot"ter the choice of weapons, and he selected "bowie knives Then there went up a "howl from the chivalry, such a thing "was barbarous Potter's friends an"swered that Pryor was a profession"al duelist a dead shot with "the pistol, and the use of that weapon gave "him an unfair advantage, and they stuck to "the knife There was talk, and meetings of "seconds, and bets that Pryor would or would "not fight, and after a delay of three days his "seconds found a way for him to sneak out, "which he did Potter was the hero of the "hour, and the incident is only recalled by "the news of his approaching end' We believe it was a part of Mr Potter's conditions that the duellists should be locked in a dark room and fight until one was dead Mr Potter is not a very old man, having been born in 1817

Mrs Langtry's New York Admirer

A dispatch from Boston in a New York paper last week said that John Stetson, manager of the Globe theater in Boston, where Mrs Langtry is playing, had turned Mr Gebhardt out of the green room and out of a private box Mr. Stetson, when asked about the matter, said,

"Mr Gebhardt was not actually turned out of the house He has been exceedingly 'fresh' about the theater, however He walked through the stage-entrance the stage door keeper admitting him because he was a friend of Mrs Langtry—went into the greenroom, and then passed into a box which I had reserved for Mrs Langtry's use The box was arranged so that she could get into it from the stage while the performance was going on, and sit there unseen by the audience. I saw Gebhardt in the box after having previously seen him go into the front of the house on a forty cent admission ticket. I asked the usher how Gebhardt came to be in the box, and found that he had simply helped himself to it I ordered the usher to give Mr Gebhardt no more seats in boxes unless he paid for them. I also ordered the back doorkeeper not to admit any more persons behind the scenes who did not have any business there That is a rule the breaking of which always leads to trouble I did not have Mr Gebhardt turned out of the box, although my stage doorkeeper was anxious to give him the bounce I will not answer for that man's actions if Gebhardt goes round there again I even tried to give Mrs Langtry a little advice about her conduct, but it was not well received She is headstrong; in fact, I believe she's 'cracked' It is not her sister who is coming over to take care of her, I may mention, but Mr Langtry She is a very foolish woman to quarrel with Mrs Labouchere"

A report has been circulated that owing to the gossip about Mrs Langtry and the consequent injury to her business in Boston, Mr Abbey intended to discontinue the engagement with her. Mr Abbey is at present in San Francisco with Mme Christine Nilsson but his business manager at the Grand opera house W W Lillottson, and his Boston partner, Mr. Schoeffel, who was in this city today, both denied emphatically that Mr Abbey had any such notion 'Why,' asked Mr Schoeffel, "should he give up an engagement which has proved so profitable' Mrs Langtry opened to $2,000 in Boston, her smallest house has been $1,800, and she has played to $2,700 Do you think that looks as if the business had been injured by this talk Mr. Abbey is not canceling such engagements as that not to any alarming extent. She will finish her season in Boston this week, and then go to Philadelphia for two weeks During Christmas week she will play in Brooklyn Come over and see if the business is very badly injured"

A gentleman who saw Mr. Gebhardt's bill for flowers, bought for Mrs Langtry while in this city, paid at the Hotel Brunswick, said that it amounted to $250 The young man, however, is very well able to pay large bills for flowers, as his property brings him a yearly income of at least $40,000, and up to the time when his attentions to Mrs Langtry became so conspicuous, he was not extravagant in his expenditures and did not live up to his income It is true that he had a racing stable, but he was so successful on the turf that his gains from that source probably exceeded his losses In 1881 he was in partnership with Arthur Hunter, the skillful and successful amateur rider at Jerome park, Monmouth, Saratoga and Sheepshead Bay, and they raced their horses under the name of the Pelham stable By far the best horse they had, and perhaps the best in training at the close of the racing season this year, was Lolo, and he won many excellent races for them Last summer Mr. Gebhardt bought Mr. Hunter's interest in Lolo, and the horse has since been his sole property. Lolo was easily the superior of every horse he met in 1882, except the renowned Hindoo Up to the time of the race for the Coney Island cup in June last Mr Gebhardt and Mr Hunter thought him better even than Hindoo, and their error cost them a round sum Mr Gebhardt was the larger loser on the race in which Hindoo one of the best horses ever bred in America—vanquished Lolo without difficulty Lolo had previously won so much money for his owners that they could well sustain this reverse, but Mr. Gebhardt was so much prostrated by his losses, or by something else, that when his form in hand coach was driven up Broadway in the evening, he was stretched out at full length upon the top of it

The hero of the Langtry Labouchere quarrel is well known at the clubs and in New York society He is a member of several clubs, and spends a good deal of his time at the Union His home is at No 100 Fifth avenue, where his brother in law and sister, Mr and Mrs Frederick Neilson, also reside Mr Gebhardt was betrothed last winter to Miss Jerome, daughter of Leonard W Jerome, but the engagement was broken by the young lady She said she could not stand a man who spelled dear "deer" and friend "frend" He is a man of good figure and more than average height, and is always attired in extreme English style His complexion is dark, his hair, eyes and moustache being black, his features regular, and his face handsome, though rather stolid In the fox hunts on Long Island he has always been conspicuous, but has never made any work at polo His horses, carriages and everything pertaining to his stables have always been models of the best English style and in nothing has he taken more pride and to nothing up to the time of Mrs Langtry's arrival in New York had he shown more devotion He has recently made some important additions to his racing stock, and is expected to play a prominent part on the American turf next season

A Common Sense Settlement of the Piano Question.

We clip the following complimentary notice of the Hallet, Davis & Co Piano from an eastern paper and take pleasure in reproducing it here for the benefit of Mr C E Aiken who is the company's agent for New Mexico and all of Colorado south of Denver:

Hallett, Davis & Co desire to remind the people of the United States that a few years ago they submitted the proposition that the argument and decision of "merit" was not the legitimate province of the piano-makers but of the pianists and composers of highest rank They now have the pleasure of submitting the results of the verdict of the leading professional musicians of Europe and America, presenting in brief card form the text of the report

THE REPORT

To the Musical People of Europe and America

"Having consented to a professional study of the relative mechanical and artistic excellence of different makes of pianos believed to represent the most successful efforts of contemporary manufacturers, we beg to report that, being influenced by a desire to settle a professional question in the permanent interest of the music art, we have endeavored to make our examinations as thorough and as exhaustive as possible, and at the same time in a spirit of entire fairness to the business of all concerned We have united on the American piano of Hallet, Davis & Co as representing, with mechanical and constructive superiority, the best and highest qualities of tone and general capacity that has yet been developed by modern industry. We give it our first preference"

AS CHEAP OF

C. E. Aiken

As of anyone else

The city is now overrun with traveling agents who will use every argument to make you think they are offering goods cheaper or better than I can sell. Judge for yourself whether a fellow knocking about the country, paying expenses of hotels, carfares, and freight on his goods from place to place, can sell any cheaper than the man who stays at home and conducts his business economically. Several have come to me recently to let me know what good bargains they had made with a traveling agent, only to find they could have done as well or better in their own town; or they come to me to repair instruments or sewing machines which they have bought from an agent who is beyond their reach. I am not bound to handle one company's goods exclusively, as is the case with most agents, but can furnish almost any make or quality. If you have set your mind on some make not in my stock, I can send for it. If you think of sending away for a piano, or some agent is trying to sell you one, I would like to have you give me an opportunity to duplicate any offers you may have received, before closing the sale. It pays to buy this class of goods of a responsible man, and it pays to patronize home enterprise too. Respectfully,

C. E. AIKEN.

Recollections of Joseph Bonaparte

Life and Letters of Francis Lieber

Joseph Bonaparte was a very affable man He liked to tell occurrences walking up and down after dinner One day having come to talk of the Inquisition and Llorente, he said to me "Llorente was my chaplain he was a liberal priest I was obliged to hear mass daily, so he used to come every morning We went into the chapel royal, sat down, and had a talk about the affairs of Spain, or whatever else interested us, and after the proper time we left the chapel The next morning the official paper had 'His majesty heard mass at such and such a time,' etc" What struck me very much in my intercourse with this very amiable man was the simplicity with which at dinner or otherwise he would introduce an anecdote or occurrence with the words "Lorsque j'etais roi de Naples, lorsque j'etais roi de Espagne." His simplicity shone forth more than ever when an old conventionalist who had come from South America to Bordentown dined with him This man, whose name I have forgotten, but it could be recovered, had been a friend of Joseph—a regular Dantonist or worse—fled when Robespierre fell knocked about South America under Bolivar and others, and now in his old age, was sitting at Joseph's table in America, and thou-ing, in the regular old convention style, the man who in the mean time had been king of Naples and worn the crown of Spain Thou rememberest, Bonaparte,' he would say, 'when Robespierre did this or that," and I, much the junior, sitting between the two, having helped to beat and dethrone Joseph's brother It was like to me the meeting of shades we read of, like history come to life again in small details

Common-sense Remedy.

SALICYLICA,

No More Rheumatism, Gout or Neuralgia.

Immediate Relief Warranted.

Permanent Cure Guaranteed.

Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic. Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists for the standing of Salicylica.

THE SECRET:

THE ONLY DISSOLVER OF THE POISONOUS URIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments, and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases, which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for RHEUMATISM, GOUT and NEURALGIA The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly

Give it a trial. Relief guaranteed or money refunded

The New Colorado

"Though a wilderness now, in five years it will be the nicest and best part of Colorado to live in and this is not exaggeration"—Prof S Richardson

The two prominent and prospective large cities of the "New Colorado," alias the late Ute Reservation, are

DELTA AND GRAND JUNCTION.

These towns have and can have in the future owing to the topography of the country, no rivals The two towns are not antagonistic to any extent, being 51 miles apart with little if any agricultural land between, and each having its own tributary region The first reached in going westward over the D & R G Railway company's trunk line to Utah is

DELTA.

This is at the junction of the Uncompahgre and Gunnison rivers and commands the great valleys of each It is 87 miles west of Gunnison city and near the geographical center of Gunnison county which comprises a territory nearly twice as large as the state of Massachusetts It has the best prospects of any town on the late reservation of being made the county seat of a new county which will probably be formed at the coming session of the next legislature Four railways pass through or center at the town, and this creates an almost inevitable necessity for shops and the end of divisions of some of these lines It is the only town on the late reservation where a school was maintained during the summer A square is set apart for school house, another for court house and four lots for each religious denomination Water flows and trees are set out on each side of Main street

Grand Junction,

The prospective Pueblo of the Pacific slope, though unlike Pueblo in having a more equable climate and an abundance of pure water, is situated at the junction of the Gunnison with the Grand, the two largest rivers in the state It commands the trade of the largest valley of cultivable land at the lowest altitude which is to be found in Colorado. It is the midland country between Pueblo and Salt Lake City, and between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, a country 550 miles in extent from east to west and still larger from north to south The town is equidistant between Salt Lake and Pueblo about 310 miles each way The town is laid off on a liberal scale Two hundred and fifty lots have been donated to the public, besides a number of squares for parks and central high school A number of wells and two large ditches furnish water for the town. The present prices of lots on my list will be raised, perhaps doubled, in three or four days.

In both towns parties intending to invest should do so at once and thus secure the advantage of increase in price The most desirable lots are nearly all gone.

Call at office of George Macklin, over Ainsworth Brown's, N. Tejon st., during office hours, or in morning and evening at solicitor's office D. & R. G. railway.

Lots for sale also in Montrose, Alamosa, Crested Butte, Colorado Springs and Denver.

The reduction of rates on both the Denver and Rio Grande and Denver and New Orleans to seventy five cents does not seem to have a tendency to take many people to Denver or Pueblo

Remember the supper to be given by the ladies of the Christian Church tomorrow night On this occasion they will also have for sale fresh candies of all kinds, made expressly for them and just the kind for holiday use

We understand that Ticket Agent C B Cox, of the Denver & New Orleans road in this city, has resigned his position with that company to accept a more responsible and remunerative one from the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe

Colorado Springs is entirely without any theatrical attractions just at the season when they are most desired and appreciated Some of the regular patrons of the opera house are curious to know the reason why. Probably no one can better explain than Manager Bush of the Colorado circuit.

Prof B B Minor gave the last of his astronomical lectures in Court House hall last night. The inmates of both the Deaf Mute Institute and the Home for Friendless Children were present upon the invitation of the professor All of the children seemed to enjoy the lecture exceedingly well

Mr Rockwell, who played with the Colorado Springs base ball nine for two years, is now filling the position of first baseman with the U P club, of Omaha "Rox," as he was familiarly known here, has a very responsible position in the auditor's office of the Union Pacific road His old friends are much gratified to learn of his good luck.

Mr O Metcalf is having the house which he owns, corner of Platt avenue and Weber street, turned into a suitable room for the use of the Episcopal Sunday school He will give the church a two years' lease of the property, and should the location and other advantages prove satisfactory he will donate the property to the use of the school

We understand that the directors of the Athletic association have abandoned the idea of doing further work on the skating rink Mr Dozier, the plans fur ished, estimates that it will cost at least $800 or $1,000 to put up a rink in suitable shape, and the directors do not feel warranted in going ahead and incurring such an expense

Alderman Himebaugh yesterday received a letter from David King, announcing the death of Mr Donald Fraser at Haven township, Kansas, on the 8th inst Mr Fraser was formerly engaged in the sheep business in El Paso county, and has a large number of friends in Colorado Springs.
